“The book of nature has no beginning,
as it has no end...”

The book of nature has no beginning, as it has no end. Open this book where you will, and at any period of your life, and if you have the desire to acquire knowledge you will find it of intense interest, and no matter how long or how intently you study the pages, your interest will not flag, for in nature there is no finality.

Here Begins the Magic

WELCOME TO THE SAURAL

There's something about the way the monsoons speak to the forest. A secret language—of mist curling over treetops, of raindrops tracing paths down ancient stone, of silence so deep it hums with life. In this quiet wild, time stretches. Nature breathes slower. Every leaf holds a story, every breeze carries the scent of earth soaked in memory.

The world as you know it begins to blur—softened by the drizzle, deepened by the green. And just before you step in, you see it: a name resting against a wall of stone, half-hidden by vines, kissed by petals, and glowing softly in the rain. It's not an arrival, not yet. It's a pause. A moment suspended. A whisper that somewhere beyond the curve of the road, a world of your own awaits.
